

red tricycle

eat + drink | 2014/02/21 | Julie Seguss

Eat Your Way Through National Peanut Butter Lover's Day

Got a little peanut butter lover? Then, March 1st, National Peanut Butter Lover's Day is just for her. What better way to celebrate than stopping into one of the following NYC spots for a peanut butter delight from cookies and cupcakes to a PB&J milkshake or salted peanut butter donut. Enjoy!

1 of 8

Max Brenner Peanut Butter & Jelly Milkshake

The kid's classic sandwich is reimagined in drinkable form by Max Brenner's Executive Pastry Chef Katie Guy-Hamilton. One of the chocolate haven's newest offerings, the PB&J Milkshake is a blend of milk chocolate ganache, peanut butter, strawberry preserves and ice cold milk. Sounds like a winning combination! If your kid is a true PB&J fanatic, pair the shake with the kid's menu offering, King Max's Peanut Butter and Banana Power Sandwich.

Insider Tip: This place gets super busy, especially on the weekends. If you're braving a Saturday or Sunday here, make a reservation to save your sanity during what could be a very long wait for a table.

Max Brenner
841 Broadway, Union Square